The Mountain Rescue

Last Saturday, a group of young hikers set out to climb Mount Glory. They had planned the expedition for months, but they had not checked the latest weather report. When they started, the sun was shining brightly. However, by noon, a thick fog covered the mountain path. The hikers realized they were lost because the trail markers had disappeared under the snow. Panic started to set in. Fortunately, one hiker had charged his satellite phone fully before leaving home. He immediately called for help. Hours later, the rescue team found the group safe in a cave. They survived because the team had located their signal quickly.

BREAKING NEWS

CITY BANK HEIST STOPPED

Yesterday afternoon, local police prevented a major robbery at the First National Bank in the city.

The incident began at 2:00 PM when the bank's silent alarm was triggered by a vigilant teller. Three masked individuals had entered the building and demanded cash from the main vault. Within minutes, police units arrived and surrounded the building, blocking all exits.

Officers used megaphones to negotiate with the suspects for over an hour. Eventually, the robbers surrendered and walked out with their hands up. No one was injured during the operation, but the bank remained closed for the rest of the day while detectives collected evidence. The police chief praised the bank staff for their quick thinking.
